Farewell For Miss Kebler

On Monday night Redmen's hall was the scene of a very pretty farewell party tendered Miss Margaret Kebler. The evening was spent in dancing and card playing and at a late hour a dainty luncheon was served. After lunch on behalf of the friends of Miss Kebler, Mr. William Downing presented her with a handsome nugget brooch.

During Miss Kebler's stay in Wrangell she has made many friends who deeply regret her departure.

DEPT OF THE INTERIOR
Gen'l Land Office
Washington, D. C.

January 22, 1910

Marcus Fayette Inman,
Wrangell, Alaska.

Sir:—

(Extract) You need not change your rate of assessment in as much as the case with the surveyor has not yet been closed, and under the decision of the Department (21 L. D., 52) money derived from lot assessments in excess of the amount required to pay the expenses of administering the trust, should be returned in just proportion to the persons from whom it was collected. You will therefore proceed to collect assessments under the rate fixed by you. Signed

FRED DENNETT,
Commissioner.

I certify the above heading and statement to be a correct copy of so much of a letter recently received from the General Land Office, as pertains to Townsite Assessments:

MARCUS FAYETTE INMAN,
Townsite Trustee.

Wrangell, Alaska; Feb. 9, 1910
I will therefore be in my office on and after Monday, Feb. 14, 1910 for reception of applications for deeds; and such other business as pertains to townsite matters. It is desirable and it is hoped that all applications for deeds will be filed promptly:

MARCUS F. INMAN,
Townsite Trustee.

Mother Kadishan and Annie Cook, natives, died Tuesday evening, the former of old age, the latter of heart disease.

Synopsis of the Beveridge Bill

All elective features have been eliminated, and it provides for government by a commission entirely appointive by the president. The commission council is to consist of eight members, four of whom are to be the attorney-general, commissioner of the interior, commissioner of education and health, and commissioner of mines; each drawing $7,500 a year, and four others appointed from the four judicial districts; each to be a resident of his district; each to draw $25 a day for attending the council and mileage at 15 cents.

The council is to meet annually on the first Monday in October. There is no limitation on the duration of its sessions. Extra sessions may be called by the governor on approval by the president. The governor is to draw $10,000 a year instead of $5,000, as at present.

In addition to the above there is to be a secretary and treasurer at $3,500, and an auditor at the same salary, both appointed by the president without limitation of term.

DELINQUENT TAX SALE NOTICE

Notice is hereby given that in pursuance of Section 20 of Ordinance No. 12 of the town of Wrangell, Alaska, duly passed and approved on the 4th day of August, 1904, providing for the sale of property to satisfy assessments against the same in said town, where the taxes have become delinquent, I will, at the hour of 1 o'clock P. M., on in front of my place of business in said town, offer for sale and sell at public auction, to the highest and best bidder (or bidders) for cash in hand on day of sale, the following described lots, parts of lots, buildings and other property described in this notice to satisfy the unpaid taxes on same for the year 1909.

A. T. Bennett, Block 19,
Lot 10, Tract No. 19 $ 1.50
Jake Johnson, Block 3 Lot 7 3.12
John E. Sales, Tract 7 2.00
M. C. Marshall, House on Waterfront 2.50
Dated at Wrangell, Alaska, this 21st day of January, 1910.

L. C. PATENAUDE,
Treasurer and ex-officio tax collector of the town of Wrangell, Alaska.

In the event that an army officer is made commissioner of the interior, he shall be chairman of the road commission, which, under the act, is made subordinate to that official. All dues and taxes under the customs and internal revenue laws; all amounts received from the sale of timber, coal lands and other parts of the public domain; all moneys for licenses outside of incorporated towns; including the Alaska fund; are to be paid into the territorial treasury. It is required that at least the average of the amount derived annually from the Alaska fund shall be spent on roads, bridges and trails:

To the governor is granted the pardoning and other powers usually vested in a territorial governor. The president is authorized to designate a vice-governor from the personnel of the commission. Reports of the governor are to be submitted to such executive department of the federal government as may be designated by the president, who is authorized to place all matters pertaining to the Alaska government in the jurisdiction of such department.

The commission is clothed with authority not only to enact laws for Alaska, but to repeal or amend existing laws, except those pertaining to customs, internal revenue, postal or other general federal laws and those fixing the authority of the judiciary. The council may grant franchises, privileges and concessions under certain restrictions:

The governor has the veto power. It may be overcome by a two-thirds vote. Congress may set aside territorial laws or, pending the act of congress, the president may do so. All salaries, mileage and traveling expenses of the officers named are to be paid by the United States, not by the territorial treasury.

H. W. Meyer, the trapper who was found badly frozen on the trail near Tanana, has suffered the amputation of both feet.

That old pipe of yours is fierce, better get a new one from Pat's.

THE DIVINE RIGHT

The Wickersham bill provides that the laws of Alaska shall be made by a local legislature, but that all the cost of making the laws as well as all the cost of enforcing them, shall be paid by the people of the United States and not by the people of Alaska.

Self government for Alaska, being urged by some boisterous individuals as a "divine right" and as vouchsafed by the Declaration of Independence, it may be well to call attention to the fact that the signers of that immortal document asked no form of government that they were unwilling or incapable to pay the cost of maintaining, and it would seem unfair to assume, without proof, that Providence is guilty of imposing upon any people or community the divine duty to make laws which they themselves are either unwilling or incapable of enforcing without aid from others.

The United States government is now expending annually some $1,600,000 for the government and upbuilding of Alaska. When the people of this country are willing to shoulder this burden their right to self-government may become a pertinent question, but not till then.

It has been argued that the United States government has been in the habit of extending to territories a measure of self government and at the same time paid the cost of such government. But this has, assuredly, not been done pursuant to any divine right on the part of the territories, but simply as a matter of convenience on the part of the United States. The situation in the territories was simply such that the people needed, for the purpose of internal improvements by way of schools and roads, the subdivision of the territory into counties, townships, school districts and other municipi-pal and quasi municipal organizations, and needed laws for the formation and government of these. Instead of undertaking this work, congress simply said to the territories: "If you will look after these matters yourselves and save us the trouble of doing so, we will pay your expenses in the matter." The question of "divine right" was in no sense involved. It was purely a question of convenience and expediency.—Record.

GATHERING ROSES

I've gathered roses and the like, in many glad and golden Junes; but now, as down the world I hike, my weary hands are filled with prunes. I've gathered roses o'er and o'er, and some were white, and some were red; but when I took them to the store, the grocer wanted eggs instead. I gathered roses long ago, in other days, in other scenes; and people said, "You ought to go and pull the weeds out of your beans." A million roses bloomed and died, a million more will die today; that man is wise who lets them slide, and gathers up the bales of hay.—Walt Mason.

In the Probate Court for the District of Alaska, Division No. One, Wrangell Precinct.

In the Matter of the Estate of Rufus Sylvester, Deceased.

TO ALL PERSONS WHOM IT MAY CONCERN

Please Take Notice that on the 27th day of January, 1910, by an order duly made and entered by the Probate Court for the Wrangell Commissioned Precinct, District and Division aforesaid, I was duly appointed Administrator of the goods, chattels and credits and estate of Rufus Sylvester, deceased, to fill the vacancy in the administration of said estate caused by the removal of Samuel Sylvester as executor of the last will and testament of the said Rufus Sylvester, deceased, and that on the 29th day of January, 1910, I duly qualified as such administrator under said appointment.

All persons having claims against said estate should present the same, with proper vouchers therefor, to me at my place of business in said Town of Wrangell, within six (6) months from the date hereof.

Dated at Wrangell, Alaska, this 31st day of January, A. D. 1910.

Here And There In

The North

The furniture used at the A.-Y.-P. exposition by Commissioner Mc Bride has been shipped to Juneau.

Three men have been marooned at Long bay and have not been seen for a month.

M. J. Heney says Delegate Wickersham is sore at the Guggenheims because they would not extend "favors" to him.

The dance of the Douglas Island Scots on Bobbie Burns' birthday was the biggest kind of a success.

The Cordova Alaskan says Wickersham is a part owner of the North Star.

Weather conditions at Miles glacier make it difficult for the Copper River and Northwestern trains to pass.

The Dora has gone to hunt the Farallon, which has not been heard of for almost a month. The Farallon was on the Kodiak run.

A storm at Juneau destroyed thousands of dollars worth of small boats and wharfs recently.

Deeds to Fairbanks property will soon be issued by the town trustee.

Yanko Terzich, a Western Federation agitator formerly at Douglas, has gone to Homestake to create trouble.

Tar paper started a fire in the steam laundry at Cordova last week and did a small amount of damage.

It is claimed that Skagway has less than 700 residents this winter.

Fairbanks owes more than $31,000.

Judge Lyons has made an order allowing A. E. Clark, special deputy in the Rhinehart case, $420. Clark traveled 480 miles through a trackless country serving subpoenas.

A big consignment of grapes in hermetically sealed boxes, were taken by dog team from Valdez to Fairbanks.

The average amount of second class mail brought over the Valdez trail these days exceeds 15,000 pounds a trip.

An eclipse of the sun was reported from Fairbanks recently and then it was found that none had occurred.

She vouchsafed no reply.
He dropped his authoritative tone and became persuasive.
"You say he was alone when you arrived. How did he receive you?" he coaxed.
She remained silent.
"What did he say to you? What did he do?"

Still she did not answer, but sat as though in a stupor.

"Come, Emma, don't be contrary. Tell all that took place. You know that it is between us— Did he ask you to kiss him?"

"I wonder what time it is," she said, with a shiver, as though she had not heard him.

"Never mind the time. What did he say when you asked him to let me off? He must have said a lot. You were gone long enough."

"Will you please tell me what time it is?"

"It is about 11:30. What of it? Why don't you tell me what happened at Williams'?"

She rose, still in her stupor of weariness.

"Goodby, Joe," she said.
"Goodby?" he echoed, amazed. "Where are you going?"

"To mother's. Jim's coming back for me."

"You didn't say anything to your mother while she was here about this?"

"That was for your sake. Every one doesn't need to know."

"What are you going to your mother's for? This is where you belong—your home. And what's Jim's got to do with it?"

"I said goodby."

"What's the reason you can't stay here?"

"You couldn't expect me to live with you after what happened tonight."

"Why not?"

There was consternation as well as anger in his voice.

"Because it is quite impossible. You ought to realize that."

"I don't see why it is impossible. Everything is all right now unless you have got some reason that makes it impossible."

"Yes, I think I've all the reason in the world to make it impossible. I think it's time for you to realize it."

CHAPTER XVII.

EMMA moved toward the door, but her husband ran and intercepted her.

"Wait a minute. You can't go that way," he said determinedly. "You are my wife, and you can't leave here without some explanation."

"I've no explanation to make," she retorted coldly. "You will please let me go. I've done my part, and it's my right to leave."

"I tell you I won't let you go until you tell me the truth. What happened with Williams, and how did you induce him to agree?"

"You've no right to ask that. The price I paid for that letter is none of your business. You set that price at the highest possible figure a woman can pay. Now, how I bargained or what I paid is none of your affair."

"It is my affair. I want to know, and I will know."

"When you sent me to that man, Joe Brooks, I told you that if I made the bargain I was to make it alone, that it was to be my business alone and that I should never be asked. You agreed. I've carried out my part. You carry out yours. I gave you your freedom. You give me mine."

"There is only one reason why you should leave here now, and that is Williams. Are you going back to him?"

She stepped back from him and swept him with a look of cold disdain.

"If there was one thing left for you to do to make you the most contemptible and you've done it now!" she exclaimed. "When you sent me to Williams I thought you'd sink as low as you could, but I see I was mistaken. There was a depth that even in my disgust, my loathing of you, I never imagined existed. But now you've reached it. I don't hate you. I just pity you."

A gleam of fury glowed in his eyes under this merciless castigation, and he moved toward her menacingly.

"That's not the answer I want," he said harshly. "You're quibbling. Tell me the truth about Williams."

"You'd better let me go."

"You'll tell me the truth about Williams before you leave this room!" he shouted. "Make up your mind to that now, because that's just the way it's going to be."

She realized that she had gone too far in her denunciation, that his anger was dangerous and that he would stop at nothing, not even blows, not even murder. He was white, his teeth were set, and on his quivering face was an expression of ferocious determination that warned her that she must temporize and appear to give in to him.

"Very well," she assented, turning from the door; "if that's the way it's going to be I'm perfectly willing."

"Then answer me."

"I intend to do that, but I intend to do something more than merely answer that question. If you don't mind we'd better sit down."

She motioned him to a chair and seated herself so that the table was between them.

"In the first place," she went on, very calmly, "in order to relieve your mind I might tell you that I have done nothing tonight which can reflect upon me as a good woman. I had no intention of doing any such thing. So far as I can find out, you are the only person who had my degradation in mind and was willing that it should happen if it resulted in your escaping the consequences of being a thief."

"What do you mean?"

"I mean that Captain Williams did not have the slightest idea of putting a price on your freedom toward which I in any way would have to contribute. You seem to be the only one who thought that I, with all I hold precious, was a fair figure to offer. Had I gone, had he demanded, had I submitted and brought back that paper and given myself to you again, as well as your freedom, you would have been contented and happy."

"You know that's not true, Emma," he protested. "The white heat of his ire had been dulled by her quietness, and little by little he was becoming cowed."

"I know it is true, Joe, and so do you. I wanted to go to mother without having all this talk, but now that we have to talk let's be frank with each other and with ourselves. And you try to appreciate the truth as much as you are able. To begin with, it seems that I have been alone in not realizing how worthless you are. My father when we were to be married warned me not to take you unless I thought you indispensable to my happiness. You know that every one else put it a little more bluntly. But I thought I loved you—I'm sure I did. Now it seems utterly beyond belief. But then it must have been love. I mistook your egotism for a deeper sentiment, a determination of purpose, and I thought in my girlish way that the things you preached about socialism, the cruelty of the rich and all that meant that you were noble, self-sacrificing, even brilliant. Now I know the difference. You fight capital? God sometimes is kind to a fighter, but he can't have much use for a man who whines."

"You betrayed me then, Emma," he said brokenly. "You know you did—you know you did."

"That's the wonderful part of it. I've always believed you till tonight, and now I know I never should have believed you. You've always been a liar, and you've always been dishonest at heart. Your incompetency, the way you were distrusted by your employers, I thought was hard luck, injustice. But now I know that you never were and never will be the least bit of good to yourself or any one else. You married me to help yourself. You tried to disgrace me to help yourself. I was willing to meet the situation, but you couldn't, and tonight you wanted to sell me to help yourself. I pity you from the bottom of my heart."

I think I've told you the reason why I cannot live with you any longer."

She rose.
"Emma," he supplicated humbly, "it will all be different. Let me start out again. Give me another chance. I'll never lie to you again, and I'll never take a cent that isn't my own. I promise you I won't."

She shook her head.

"Oh, yes, you will. You can't help it. Captain Williams told me tonight that a woman who was good couldn't be bad and a woman who was bad couldn't be good. It's that way with men. One who is inherently honest could never be dishonest, and one who is inherently dishonest could never be honest. You are both a thief and a liar, and there is no hope for you. You've struck the downward path, and you'll keep on going until the end. If you ever had a chance it was with me, and you've thrown it away. I'm sorry, more sorry than I can tell. Goodby."

He leaped to the door, which she was about to open, and placed his hand against it.

"Emma, you mustn't go. You can't go. I will not let you go."

"I will go, and I request that you will open the door," she said firmly.

She grasped the handle, but he put out his arm and forced her away.

"Enough of this tomfoolery!" he cried, with a savage scowl, following her up menacingly as she staggered back. "I'm your husband. I order you to stay here, and here you will stay!"

"It only remained for you to strike me!" she gasped.

"Strike you! I'll strangle you if you ever dare to try to speak to me again as you have done this night. I've borne with you and humored you and put up with your insults too long. What I did was for you, and you know it. What you did, about which you are giving yourself such airs, is no more than any wife would do for a husband who'd acted as I did. That's all there is to it, and I don't want to hear any more about it now or at any other time. I'm master in this house, and I'm going to remain master."

"You are not my master, and you can't frighten me with your threats," she retorted. "Open the door this instant!"

He grasped her roughly by the arm. "You take your hat off and go to bed," he ordered, pushing her toward the bedroom. "That's the best place for you."

"Never!" she panted, wrenching herself free and grasping a vase on the table to defend herself with. "If you make one step toward me, you coward, I'll scream for help."

Rushing at her, he seized her by the throat and hurled her on the sofa. His fingers tightened their grip, choking all utterance.

"You will leave me, will you?" he cried, shaking her with all his strength. "Leave me! Leave me! Then you will leave me dead!"

He did not hear a knock nor the opening of the door that followed it.

A hand gripped him by the collar, and his own grasp of Emma's frail form relaxed. The hand swung him round and sent him reeling across the room.

"What's the matter with you, Brooks? Has it got to wife beating now?"

Smith stood looking at him scornfully.

Emma struggled up, more dead than alive.

"Oh, Jimsy," she cried, "he tried to kill me because I would not stay with him!"

"All right, Emma, you go now," he replied.

"You stop here!" commanded her husband furiously. "What does this man mean by interfering in my affairs?"

"I guess that man has a big claim on your gratitude," said Smith. "That's two escapes you've had tonight—one from the penitentiary and one from the electric chair. You've a whole lot to be thankful for if you only knew it, Brooks, but it looks like you don't."

Emma had reached the door and hurried out without looking back. Her husband would have rushed after her, but between him and the exit stood the tall form of Smith, and there was something in Jimsy's look, in the lines that had tightened about his mouth, that caused him to hesitate. He had never imagined that the kind, genial face could take on such an expression. The eyes had become hard and forbidding, and under their keen gaze the man's feeble courage wilted.

"Brooks," said Smith, "you have no more rights. You relinquished them

NOTICE OF FINAL SETTLEMENT

Notice is hereby given that John Schuler, administrator of the estate of Amelia Schuler, deceased, has filed in the Probate Court of Wrangell Precinct, Alaska, his final account, and the Court has set February 15, 1910, as the day for hearing objections, and all persons having objection thereto, are cited to appear on that date, at one o'clock p. m. at the court house at Wrangell.

Dated December 14, 1909.

JOHN SCHULER
Administrator.

Whist Party

Last Saturday night the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Hofstad was the scene of a very pleasant party given in honor of their niece Miss Alfreda Hofstad of Scow Bay. Whist was the order of the evening, at which game Miss Zimmerman and Mr. Matheson carried off first honors and Capt. and Mrs. Rastad secured the consolation prizes. At a late hour luncheon was served to the following guests: Mr. and Mrs. Bronson, Mr. and Mrs. Matheson, Mr. and Mrs. McCormack, Capt. and Mrs. Rastad, Mrs. Campbell, Mrs. Bushell, Miss Carhart, Miss Zimmerman, Miss McCormick, Miss Hofstad and Miss Katharine Bronson.

Father Sweere of Ketchikan will arrive on the Jefferson this evening and will hold services at the Catholic church at 8 and 11 a. m. Sunday.

Yesterday was Chinese New Years and Capt. Link kept open house all day in honor of the occasion.

Larry McKechnie, well known here as former assistant engineer of the steamer Alaska, was a passenger down from Juneau on the Cottage, and has been busily engaged since renewing old acquaintances.

Schooner For Sale

The schooner Ragnhild is offered for sale at a reasonable figure. She is 36 feet long, with a beam of 11 ft. 6 inches, and a 9 h. p. Truscott engine. She is thoroughly equipped with sails, rigging, sidelights and cable, batteries and magneto, air, naphtha and gasoline tanks, whistle, engine tools and cook stove, etc. She is to be seen near the local electric power house, and the price and other particulars can be learned from either Joe Ensley or Orval Palmer.

Washing and ironing, pressing, cleaning and plain sewing at Mrs. Wm. Lewis.

Louis Levy, representing Joseph Ullmann, the big New York FUR buyer, will spend the winter in Southeastern Alaska, making frequent calls at Wrangell.

Patenaude carries the best in Cigars, Tobaccos, Pipes, and Smokers' supplies in general.

When in need of a tombstone for your departed one, write to the Juneau Marble works, James Hogan, proprietor, Juneau, Alaska. Designs and prices furnished on application.

Elect New Officers

Alert Fire Co., No. 1 held a most enjoyable smoker Wednesday evening at which time the following officers were elected:
